Drug situation thought changing

Budget increase seems possible

A budget increase of about 7 per cent for Marshall for 1970-71 over 1969-70 appears possible under guidelines being followed by the Board of Regents, The Parthenon learned Wednesday.

State government has allocated $5.3 million for 1970-71 for the 11 institutions under the Board of Regents control. This is a 7.32 per cent increase over the current fiscal year overall and includes a 7.87 per cent increase for personal service (staff, faculty salaries).

Although the Board has not released any budget figures for individual institutions it appears likely that Marshall can expect an increase close to the 7.32 per cent overall for all higher institutions.

As for salaries of employees of the colleges and institutions, a spokesman said the 7.87 per cent increase in personal services doesn't necessarily mean employees (faculty, staff, etc.) are in line for such an increase for 1970-71.

In determining the allocation of the personal service increase, presidents of the institutions are to consider salaries of present staff members, needs of additional staff and cost of living increase.

Marshall's 1969-70 budget is $7,589,929.

An announcement on individual budget allocations for MU and the other state schools is expected very soon.

In other action at Tuesday's meeting in Charleston, the Board approved final plans and specifications for the $800,000-plus upgrading of Fairfield Stadium. Bids on installing synthetic turf, adding 8,000 seats and new dressing rooms will be opened by the Board at Charleston at 2:30 p.m. April 2.

The Board also voted salary increases to the presidents of the 11 universities and colleges under its control. Included was the salary of MU President Roland H. Nelson Jr. whose yearly income goes up from $27,500 to $29,500 effective with the start of the new fiscal year July 1.

ISP names candidates for election

By RICK BANKS
Staff Reporter

The just formed Independent Student Party dominates every slot in class officers elections except sophomore vice president, graduate and unclassified officers.

Michael Gant, Huntington sophomore, and Madeline Stover, Beckley junior, are the ISP candidates for student body president and vice president respectively.

Gant was freshman class president, is chairman of finance committee, chairman of teacher evaluation committee, chairman of teacher education committee, member of the University Council, and Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary.

Miss Stover is the vice president of the junior class, co-ordinator of Winter Weekend, a member of the Interdormitory Council and Phi Mu sorority.

ISP candidate Sandra Hammat, Williamstown senior, is

Drug comments said inaccurate

By DENISE GIBSON
Staff reporter

It is not easy to obtain marijuana or other drugs on campus, according to Dr. Donald K. Carson, dean of students.

Dr. Carson said the Rev. George Sublette's statement in Tuesday's Parthenon that drugs are easy to pick up "was a shock to me."

"No information has come to me this year that indicates the student union, residence halls or Greek houses are contact points for drugs. We would be most interested in this information if Rev. Sublette or anyone else has it."

The Rev. Sublette said Wednesday that his statement had been given in an interview in October, and the situation, as he sees it, has since changed.

He said, "In my opinion, we've reached the peak of drug use and passed it." He said he based this opinion from seeing students who want to get off drugs.

The Rev. Sublette added, "Those comments were accurate about the drug situation in October, but they have now changed."

In a previous statement, Dr. Carson said that drugs were being used on the Marshall campus, but to say there was a "problem" was incorrect.

He said, "As I indicated before, drugs are being used. I am sure there are people who have experimented with marijuana. The Office of Student Personnel Programs is now interested in why students feel a need to take drugs."

The Rev. Sublette also agreed that the drug problem was not extensive. He said in talks with federal drug officials he learned that MU's drug problem was not as great as those on other campuses.

Counseling services for students with drug problems are being offered through the Office of Student Personnel Programs and the Counseling and Testing Center. Dr. Carson emphasized, "We are now providing service and information to students to promote a greater understanding about drug use and drug abuse."

Film, speakers discuss pollution dangers today

Environment teach-in

By STEVE BURNETTE
Staff reporter

ENACT (Environmental Action) will hold a teach-in at 11 a.m. today prior to its April 22 teach-in.

The program will begin with a one-hour film dealing with the immediate dangers of pollution to society. The film in the Science Hall Auditorium will run continuously from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Following the film, four speakers will be sponsored by ENACT in Shawkey Student Union. The speakers will discuss various problem areas of pollution.

Duncan Williams, professor of English, will begin the program at 1 p.m. with a discussion of the problems related to an uncontrolled population growth.

Dr. A. E. McCaskey, dean of the College of Applied Science, will relate the water quality and pollution problems to our waterways at 1:30 p.m.

Following Dr. McCaskey, Carl Beard, director of Air Pollution Control Board will discuss the problems of air pollution on both national and local scales.

At 2:40 p.m. Richard T. Jennings, instructor of English, will end the program with an analysis of the effects of population on the overall quality of life.

The speakers will discuss their topics for 15 minutes and leave the remaining time open to questions from the audience.

In addition to today's program, ENACT is sponsoring a clean-up Saturday in Ritter Park, beginning at 10 a.m. at the tennis courts.

The group of students and interested citizens intend to pick up the abundance of trash in the park.

According to Dominick Versace, Saddle Brook, N.J., junior and chairman of ENACT, the clean-up is to demonstrate a constructive example of how individual citizens can clean up their immediate environment with a little effort.

Tonight's faculty recital features Dr. Paul Balshaw

There will be a Faculty Recital featuring Dr. Paul Balshaw on March 5 in the Evelyn Holberg Smith Music Hall at 8:15 p.m.

The recital will be a program of songs and arias.

The recital will be open to the public free of charge.

Dr. Balshaw is a well known concert singer in Eastern and Midwestern United States, and has made many professional appearances.

History talk to be given by Dr. Clark

By JIM PERRY
Staff reporter

"The South in This Age of Change" will be a talk given at 2 p.m. Friday in Evelyn Holberg Smith Music Hall Auditorium by Dr. Thomas D. Clark, professor of history at Indiana University.

Sponsored by the Haynes-Bankers' Life Lecturer in History, Dr. Clark and members of the local chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, national honor society in history, will be honored at a dinner Friday evening at the Uptowner Inn. Following the dinner Dr. Clark will discuss "The Lingering Heritage of the Frontier."

According to Dr. Charles Moffat, chairman of the history department at MU, the afternoon lecture is open to the public.

Student body president speaks on key topics

By LES SMITH
Managing editor

Editor's note: This is the first part of an interview with Student Body President Pam Slaughter. The final part will appear in the Friday edition of The Parthenon.

Most seniors, during their final semester of college begin breaking ties with extra-curricular activities and other organizations.

But for Pam Slaughter, Dunbar senior, her final semester at MU brought a new student position with greater responsibilities. The former student body vice president advanced to president of the student body following the resignation of Jim Wooton.

Besides serving in both these positions this year, Miss Slaughter was also one of three students on Student Conduct and Welfare Committee and was also a member of the Athletic Board. She has been a cheerleader during each of her four years at MU; was junior class vice president; and a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, and Fagus.

In an interview with The Parthenon Tuesday, Miss Slaughter talked of the Wooton-Slaughter administration, Student Government, and the student's role in governing the University.

Q. What are your feelings as to the effectiveness of the Wooton-Slaughter administration? Did you accomplish the goals you expected to?

A. No, we didn't accomplish all the goals. Overall, we weren't as effective as we should have been. The major reason was because Jim and I didn't work together. And when you have a student body president and vice president that don't work together, you have a basic weakness that's detrimental to all other branches of government. In our platform, we wanted to restructure Student Government -- a re-evaluation. This came but it came late because after we got into office, Jim didn't feel it was important as he did last year.

At the end of this year, I felt I owed so much to the student body, even if I were only going to be in office only one month. I felt this re-evaluation needed to be done because it was one of the things we fought for last year. These things were very, very important to me because I felt that I had failed.

Q. In what areas have you made greater progress than you anticipated?

A. In the re-evaluation and restructuring, I expected to just get the basis laid, but I think we've done more than that this year. In the past month, the work of (Senate) Rules Committee has really done a lot.

Q. Where do you feel you failed in your plans?

A. In student-faculty relations. This has been the thing that people have run on for years. I'm not saying it hasn't been done in years past either and it wasn't done this year. We've made a step forward, though. We put more people on faculty committees, but as far as making them responsible representatives and in making their representation meaningful to students, we didn't.

Q. Have the faculty and administrative members of these committees realized the importance of students' voices on committees?

A. Definitely. Just on the two I've been on this year (Student Conduct and Welfare Committee and Athletic Board), Dean Buskirk and two or three other people have been interested in students' opinions on anything and these opinions have always been of prime importance. Dr. Carson and Dean Curris have done triple duty in getting students involved and not one time on something major -- like security on campus -- has the administration made up a policy without students. And this is very much to be said for the administration.

Q. What committees do you feel warrant student representation, but have no student members?

A. One -- Faculty Personnel Committee -- which hires and fires teachers and decides salaries, and they wouldn't allow one student on that committee.

Q. Do you feel student absences at committee meetings have hurt efforts for better student representation?

A. Yes they have. Last year, our plan was to have them report to Student Government so we could know what's going on. What's the use of them going and representing students if we don't know what's happening. But we haven't done that. If they didn't go, we didn't know about it. No one knew that students weren't attending until last week and all of a sudden faculty and administration started writing and asking "Where are the students?" We have been going on the assumption that students are responsible enough to be there and adequately represent the students. But they haven't been.

Teaching center praised by dean

By MARGARET McCURE
Staff reporter

"We have other projects under way which also are worthy of this type of recognition and we hope that the years ahead will prove this to be so," Dr. Robert B. Hayes, dean of Teachers College, said.

Dean Hayes was making reference to the Oley School Project and other projects that are in relation to the Multi-Institutional Student Teaching Center in Kanawha County that brought the "Distinguished Achievement Award" to Marshall University Teachers College.

The University participates in the Center by working with Kanawha County and six sister institutions, as well as with the state department of education, the lay community, and professional organizations.

Mrs. Kathryn Maddox, coordinator of the Center, said that the focus is on "preparing better teachers for the real world of today" and to encourage West Virginia teachers to stay in the state to teach.

Unique opportunities for Center student teachers include: (a) pre-student teaching orientation week, (b) joint seminars with other colleges, (c) interschool and intraschool observation of outstanding teachers, (d) assistance from the county's sixty specialists and coordinators, (e) curriculum planning and teaching within a team structure, and (f) an overnight retreat planned by student teachers to analyze and evaluate their student teaching experience.

Through the Center, MU is involved in a variety of microteaching labs and interaction analysis and simulation techniques. These innovative practices are shared with supervising teachers through cooperative in-service and graduate programs.

Mr. John Santrock, associate superintendent of instruction in Kanawha County schools and chairman of the advisory committee of the Center, said that teacher education would profit better if it would achieve the goal of "continued love for learning K-12."

Lee discusses 'ups' and 'downs'

By JEFF NATHAN
Sports writer

For Russell Lee this year's basketball season has had its ups and downs.

Everyone expected great things from the 6-5 sophomore when the season began, but in his first varsity game, a 96-80 loss to Kansas, he got in foul trouble early and scored only six points. He followed by scoring 25 and 26 points in the two games of the Steel Bowl Classic in Pittsburgh, and then in his home debut he proved himself worthy of his press notices scoring 40 points against Morris Harvey.

However a midseason slump hit him, and as his fortunes went, so went the team's. While he suffered through several consecutive sub-par performances, the Herd also seemingly lost the touch and dropped six games in a row.

Many MU fans were beginning to lose confidence, but the team never doubted its own ability, and Feb. 11 the Herd, led by Lee, broke out of the slump and beat MAC champion Ohio University 93-88, in a game which almost made the losing streak seem worthwhile.

Lee bagged 36 against the Bobcats and followed with two more 30 point performances, before slacking off to 21 against St. Peter's and Kent State. However, he finished strong by scoring 30 points in the 125-98 romp over Western Michigan.

For the 23 games, he scored 554 points, a 24.1 average, on 213-481 from the field, 44.3 per cent, and 128-179 from the foul line, 71.5 per cent. He grabbed 218 rebounds for a 9.5 average, and is the greatest first year varsity scorer in Marshall history.

Despite the Herd's 9-14 season record, Lee is not disappointed. "I was happy to have the experience of playing varsity ball," he said. "In some games I was good and in others I was bad. And sometimes my defense was good and my offense bad and vice-versa. I can't score 30 points every game."

According to Lee, his performance was effected by the way people guarded him. "If a man covers me one-on-one I'll kill him with my moves. I've played against some real tough men, but I think I can beat anyone one-on-one."

Looking back over the year and speculating for the future, Lee said, "This year I played mostly against juniors and seniors and I expect the juniors to play better against me next year."

"I'll be glad to see some of the seniors graduate, especially Walt Williams of Miami. He's a great defensive player. It will be a tough battle next year, because the men I played against know me better, but I also know them better. I think my performance this year was only fair.

He said concerning his record breaking performance of top first-year varsity scorer, "I wasn't trying to be the top scorer. A lot of the people thought I could do it, but I just wanted to help the team win games. I feel real good about setting it, but I won't go around bragging about it and let it go to my head. I still have two years left and I think I can do a lot better."

At the beginning of the season Lee said he would break George Stone's scoring records for career points. "I said that because I have more respect for that man than anyone I know and I feel it would be a great honor to break a record set by a man as great as he is," he said.

He feels the loss of Joe Taylor will hurt but looks for better teams in the future. He said about Taylor, "There is only one Joe Taylor, and he is irreplaceable. He has a golden arm from the corner and when he lets go, you know the ball is going to see nothing but net. He had some bad games like the rest of us, but his attitude and rhythm are always sweet."

Lee feels that if his brother Gene returns, he will be a great asset to the team. "I don't know if Gene will be back next year because the doctor hasn't given him his final approval, but I know I missed him this year."

"I'm not knocking this year's guards, they were good, but Gene and I have been playing together since we were knee high and we know each other's moves like a blind man reads braille. He's going back home next week and work out and I know if he is able to play next year that he'll be even better than his freshman year."

Lee also feels the addition of Mike D'Antoni and Tyrone Collins from the freshman team will help. "D'Antoni is a hell of a ball player," he said. "He knows what to do with the ball all the time. He's a great ball handler and if he spots an open man he'll hit him right away."

"Collins is a great outside shot and he has some good moves. He sometimes slacks off on defense, but when he gets the ball he's hard to handle."

Between now and next season, Lee plans to keep busy. "I'm going home this summer to attend the Celtic Basketball Camp. I'm taking Blaine Henry with me and I think he'll learn a lot too. Now that this season is over I'm going to forget about it and work on my foul shooting and defense."

According to Lee, Acting

Head Coach Stewart Way should be praised for the fine work he did during the athletic turmoil.

As for next year, he says, "If we get games from Blaine Henry like he played against Western Michigan to go along with the other talent we'll have, no one will be able to stop us."

RUSS LEE, BOSTON, MASS. SOPHOMORE TIPS ONE IN.
Lee had a 24.1 average on 213-481 from the field.

Intramural playoffs held

Four games were played Tuesday night in the playoffs to determine the division representatives for the men's intramurals cage tournament, March 9-17.

In the tight American League western division two playoff games were needed. Affa-Kaffa Daffa, led by Dave Lucas' 24 points defeated the Ozarks 59-36. The second game saw Alpha Sigma Phi twos win in a close 36-34 contest over South Hall twos.

Mullins led the victorious Alpha Sigs with 11 points but game scoring honors went to Tipton of South Hall with 15.

In the American League eastern division playoff game Ace & Melines Magician's defeated the Ripple Wines 49-33.

Don Hall led the Magician's in scoring with a 24 point performance. He was aided in that department by Dennis Blevins who tallied 13.

In the National League western division, the Dirty Dozen defeated the Trojans 33-23. Bob Lewis of the Dirty Dozen was the only man in double figures with 10 points.

PRACTICE IS WHAT makes perfect and the Infantry Drill Regulation Squad of MU Reserve Officers Training Corps is following that advice.

Eight schools enter Saturday drill meet

By WILLIAM O'CONNELL
staff reporter

Doing anything Saturday morning? Want to go to the MUIDM. It's free.

What's an MUIDM? Marshall University Invitational Drill Meet, that's what.

The meet will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday in Gullickson Hall Gymnasium. Sponsored annually by Company N-1 Pershing Rifles, this year's competition will see eight schools vying for honors in precision drills.

Teams have entered from West Virginia State, Charleston; The University of Akron, Akron, Ohio; Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.; Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, and MU. Also appearing are the Ashland Rifles of Ashland, Ky., the Burch Riflettes of Delbarton and the Toledo Misslettes of Toledo, Ohio.

The day's events include IDR (Infantry Drill Regulation) Squad, IDR Platoon, Exhibition Squad, Exhibition Platoon, IDR Individual, Women's Coed

Competition and Exhibition Individual.

IDR Squad involves eight men and commander performing military drill sequences. Judging is based on precision, response to commands, uniformity and execution of movement. Each sequence will last approximately 15 minutes.

IDR Platoon is similar to squad competition. However, 30 men perform the drill routines in this portion of the meet.

Exhibition Squad and Exhibition Platoon are open to any number of individuals. Exhibition involves trick drill sequences. Rifles will be spun, tossed, passed, slapped and occasionally dropped in this highly competitive and colorful segment of the meet.

In IDR Individual competition one man performs a straight drill sequence and is judged on the same basis as is the IDR Squad.

Four teams will perform in the Women's Coed Competition Saturday. The women's divisions are not as strictly military as are the men's. Nevertheless the women are as exacting in their drill as men. This area of competition is usually among the most popular at drill meets.

Exhibition Individual, like IDR Individual, has one man competing alone before the judges. However, in this event trick drill is the special concern of each man as he tries to better his opponents performances.

Judging will be U.S. Army sergeants chosen from the ROTC departments of schools in the meet.

Conference offers ideas

Ideas obtained from the Mid-Atlantic Volunteer Organization Leadership Conference last weekend at Duke University may be incorporated into plans of MU volunteer organizations, according to Dr. Donald K. Carson, dean of students.

Dr. Carson and representatives from Volunteers in Community Service, Black United Students and the Appalachian Interest Group attended the two-day conference which included workshops on organization of day care centers, Appalachian studies programs and mental retardation programs.

Dr. Carson also said the representatives learned useful techniques for organizing their groups and keeping them active once organization is complete.

Stiles appointed to degrees post

By GREG OXLEY
Staff reporter

The appointment last week of Jeffrey Stiles as student representative on the Commencement and Honorary Degrees Committee, in one of Pam Slaughter's first acts as student body president, ended a five-month vacancy in the post, according to Dr. Jack R. Brown, degrees committee chairman.

According to Dr. Brown, Chairman of the Department of English, no student representative has been present at any of the Committee meetings to date.

Dr. Brown said a student was appointed at the start of the school year. However, former Student Body President James Wooton called saying the student was too busy to serve.

Wooton said he would appoint another representative, but the appointment of Student Body Vice President Stiles was the first action to come.

Miss Slaughter said the Committee, which will be discussing honorary degree recipient, commencement plans, and elimination of $10 graduation absence fee, has been notified of Stiles' appointment. Next committee meeting will be next Wednesday.
